Program for the gifted explained

By JANE GUILL

One program at Appomattox County High School that is unfamiliar to most students is the Gifted and Talented program. I referred to this program as unfamiliar because 80% of students I have talked to don't know about the program. The purpose of this column is to better explain the program.

The Gifted and Talented program is in all the schools in Appomattox County, but is different at each school.

To be considered as a participant in the program, a student must have the following criteria: IQ of 120 and above and/or, 95% or above on standardized tests, and/or teacher recommendation of talented students. The students who meet these requirements are reviewed by a Gifted and Talented faculty committee.

After selection, each student is assigned to a counselor. Counselors for the program are Mrs. Emilia Racer and Mrs. Martha Wilson, teachers at ACHS, and Mrs. Linda Archer, guidance counselor at ACHS.

A student who is in the Gifted and Talented program must do projects in a specific area of their choice. Music, home economics, drama, and English are some examples. After their area of concentration is chosen, they then plan activities that deal with their project area. To complete the program, a student must finish one long term project and two short term projects. They must attend three cultural activities, and at least one seminar. After completion the projects will be graded on a scale of Excellent, very good, good or fair.

At the end of the year if the program is successfully completed, each student is presented with a certificate.

Mrs. Wilson said the Gifted and Talented program is "very worthwhile." Among other things the Gifted and Talented program is designed for the conscientious student:

As a follow up to last week's column. I would like to congratulate Shawn Harvey homecoming queen 1981.

The juniors may have the reputation for being the hardest working class, but the seniors at ACHS still dominated spirit week. The seniors won the spirit chain competition by raising $169.00. The juniors captured second place with $146.05. Third place went to the sophomore class who raised $137.37, the freshmen had $64.61 to place fourth. The costume contest went to the juniors. The seniors won a $10.00 prize for having the best banner as well as winning the spirit week competition with 71% participation. The seniors definitely had the most pep and they showed it by winning the spirit stick.

IN CELEBRATION of Yorktown Day, Kindergarten and first grade students at Pamplin Elementary School learned about the important role of a drummer during the period of the American Revolution. Drummer Robin Paulette taught the students some rhythms to march by and accompanied them as they sang songs of the war period.
